

Rostov Information

NAME: Lestat Rostov
RACE: Human
AGE: 50
HEIGHT: 6ft
WEIGHT: 180lbs
EYES: Black
HAIR: Grey

Background:

Lestat's family tree can be traced back to ancient Russian nobility. Since then, however, much has changed. Somewhere along the line, his ancestors moved to Paris, France, where Lestat grew up. He lived a fairly privileged life as a result of the circles his parents socialized and worked with. His father was a low level aide to several Federation Presidents and his mother was a political analyst. They were in a constant struggle with their finances to keep up appearances.

As a young child he was allowed to attend dinners where adults were constantly discussing Federation politics. He went to private school with other kids from privileged families from all over the galaxy whom were inevitably involved with the Federation in some way or another. Lestat showed a high level of intelligence from a very young age. He was always characterized as being very charismatic, competitive and determined. At the age of 18, he applied and was accepted to Starfleet Academy. He completed his studies and graduated with honors with a specialization in Terrestrial Affairs.

His first assignment was to Starfleet Headquarters in San Francisco. There he became interested in the inner workings of the Federation and Starfleet. He also continued his studies in Terrestrial affairs. Soon, he became well known and respected for his knowledge in this area.

It was in San Francisco where he met his wife, Sonya Martinez. They made quite a couple and were very popular on the young social scene. Lestat and Sonya dated for a short time, when she unexpectedly became pregnant. As a result, they married quickly and shortly thereafter, a son was born. Unfortunately, the baby suffered complications at birth and died just a few weeks later. This experience affected Lestat in many deep ways and also his relationship with Sonya. It was almost as if his emotional side shut down.

He dealt with his pain by focusing on his work and career advancement. Lestat spent the next seven years traveling the galaxy studying alien races and sharing his information with the highest levels of Starfleet and the Federation. Sonya traveled with him when she could, but most of the times she was left at some lonely outpost while he worked. Ultimately, he was forced to leave this work because Sonya contracted Correllium fever, and fell into a deep coma. After countless doctor examinations, it was concluded that nothing could be done for her. Sonya seemed condemned to spend the rest of her life in a catatonic state.

Lestat moved back to Earth and ensured that Sonya has the best care money could afford, but there was not much that could be done for her. Back on Earth, he was assigned as a special advisor on Terrestrial Affairs to the Federation Council. It was during this period of his life when things changed dramatically for Lestat. Councilman Truman Alkobar took a special liking to Lestat, and soon took him under his wing. Two years later, Lestat was Alkobar's unofficial right hand man.

During this time, the Federation Council decided that something had to be done to keep tighter control of places far from their control. The Council established the Office of the Federation Liaison, which would act as the right hand of the Council. The Liaisons would answer solely to the members of the Council, and had the highest level of security clearance. They were declared to be totally outside the regular chain of command at Starfleet.

Alkobar immediately began preparing Lestat for this position. In the year that followed, Alkobar introduced Lestat to the most powerful people in the galaxy. He was able to make connections that most people didn't even know existed.

When the Federation Liaison position to the Delta Quadrant became available, Alkobar quickly had Lestat appointed. Soon he was traveling throughout the Delta Quadrant basically being the eyes and ears of the Council. During this time, Lestat made many friends and even more enemies, however, he was able to attain more power than he ever thought possible. He had become a master of manipulation, intrigue and deceit. What made him so successful was that he was able to do it all with incredible charm and class. Through payoffs, kickbacks and backroom deals at the highest levels, Lestat quickly amassed a small personal fortune. His lifestyle was one of extreme wealth, which was explained as family money. At the same time, Sonya, who had been traveling with him in her catatonic state, suddenly came out of her coma. For reasons unknown to the doctors that examined her, she made a complete recovery. Unfortunately, the same could not be said about their relationship. During the years of Sonya's coma, Lestat had changed tremendously and he had gained a reputation as a man with many beautiful lady friends. However, the two did initially try to rekindle their relationship and a daughter, Alexa, was born. She was the love of his life and reason for living. He would do anything for her and no matter how busy he was, always put aside time daily to dedicate to her, even if it was over a subspace channel. Because of Alexa and to once again maintain appearances, Sonya and Lestat reached an agreement. She would play the role of the beautiful, perfect wife and he would grant her a very generous allowance to maintain her highend lifestyle.

Tensions in the Delta Quadrant with Starfleet Command ultimately reached a breaking point and Lestat resigned his commission and returned to Earth with his family at the request of Councilman Alkobar. They settled into a beautiful chateau on the outskirts of Paris, France and he began work as a Special Envoy to the Federation Council. The next four years were filled with long, classified trips to parts unknown dealing with all sorts of matters of importance to the Federation and especially Councilman Alkobar.

Then finally, an opportunity arose for Councilman Alkobar and his supporters to push for a stronger, more impactful presence in the Delta Quadrant that wasn't represented by Starfleet. A large investment was made to setup a full Federation delegation in the Delta Quadrant that would act as an extension of the Council itself. The pieces had finally aligned where Alkobar was able to appoint the person for the job, and it was Lestat who became the first official Federation Ambassador to the Delta Quadrant.

Lestat sadly left Alexa behind, but understood that safety was going to be an issue and Sonya was certainly not willing to give up her life and travel to the far reaches of the galaxy again. For the next year, Lestat traveled through the Delta Quadrant on a newly retrofitted Armitage Class starship that the Council had gifted to the Ambassador. His primary mission was to make as many connections as he could and show that the Federation was taking a new direction with the Delta Quadrant, as well as significant investments, which were obvious just from the look of the SS Libratore. Now it was time to officially setup roots and open an Embassy. The decision of where it should be was easy to make. Sentinel Station was at the doorway of the Geroch Wormhole and presented so many opportunities, including the Hope One Dyson Sphere.

NAME: Sonya Rostov
RACE: Human
AGE: 42
RELATION: Wife

Background:

Sonya Martinez was raised in Madrid, Spain. Her father was a successful attorney and her mother a prima ballerina. She enjoyed a good childhood and benefited from a fairly affluent lifestyle until her father was arrested and convicted of assisting a crime syndicate in washing money. Shortly after being arrested her father died in prison, and although it was classified as a suicide, her family never accepted that ruling, instead believing he had been killed.

After this tragic event, life for Sonya, her younger sister and her mother changed drastically. They lost their home and basically all of their possessions. Their mother managed to keep the family fed and together, but it was a sharp contrast from their previous lifestyle.

At the age of 20, Sonya moved to San Francisco, California to pursue a career in art. Shortly after moving into the city she met a young, new Starfleet Officer named, Lestat Rostov. He was dashing and charismatic and she was instantly attracted to him.

They enjoyed a whirlwind romance, until she discovered that she was pregnant. Lestat insisted they marry immediately and she agreed. When their son was born, something was wrong and the baby immediately fell ill. A mere two weeks after having given birth, the baby had died. The once dotting and charming Lestat became quiet and somewhat indifferent to her.

As she followed Lestat around, playing the role of the good wife, she knew their relationship would never be the same. She had turned to alcohol and was finally getting the courage to divorce Lestat when she contracted Correllium fever.

Years later, when she unexpectedly came out of her coma the past seemed such a distant memory. She hoped that things could be different with her husband. Although both initially attempted, she noticed that he had changed. The years had made him colder, although you couldn't tell from the outside, his charm and wit still intact. But she knew the man was hollow inside. Just when she decided to end things, she discovered she was again pregnant. This time, a daughter, Alexa was born and was healthy.

Three years later, Sonya could no longer stand living with Lestat, although she did grow very happy with the luxurious lifestyle he afforded her. Rather than divorcing, the two reached an agreement where they would maintain appearances for a generous allowance. The one thing that wasn't negotiable, was that she was done traveling and living in the farthest reaches of the galaxy and wanted to return to Earth with Alexa. Lestat had tried everything he could to prevent her from taking his beloved daughter, but ultimately gave in and bought them a beautiful chateau on the outskirts of Paris, France where they currently reside.

NAME: Alexa Rostov

RACE: Human
AGE: 12
RELATION: Daughter
Background:

Alexa was born on Romulus while her father was negotiating a trade accord between the Federation and the Romulan Empire. She spent the first three years of her life traveling the Delta Quadrant with her parents as her father fulfilled his duties as a Federation Liaison.

She and her mother moved back to Earth and lived in beautiful chateau in the French countryside outside of Paris. She missed her father terribly and always looked forward to their daily conversations. When her father eventually resigned his Starfleet commission and moved back to Earth, she was thrilled to be living with him again. However, his frequent and long trips as a Special Envoy to the Federation Council basically meant that he wasn't home much either, although he still managed to speak with her or send her a message every day.

Alexa was again heartbroken when her father broke the news that he had been appointed the new Federation Ambassador to the Delta Quadrant. She wanted to go with him so badly, but it wasn't to be.

NAME: Simon Rowland
RACE: Human
AGE: 46
POSITION: Chief of Staff

Simon was raised in London, England to a humble family with two older brothers and one younger sister. He lived a normal life and was accepted into Oxford University, where he specialized in Intergalactic Political Affairs.

As part of his curriculum, he did a semester at Starfleet Academy, where he met a young Lestat Rostov. They shared several classes together and became friends. Rowland was incredibly intelligent and had an uncanny ability to approach problems from various different perspectives.

It was this ability that allowed him to work with several different governments, including the Federation. Rostov and Rowland maintained their friendship throughout all their travels. In actuality, they were both probably the only real friend they each had.

Lestat had used Simon on several occasions throughout the years for information. When he was tapped to be the new Ambassador to the Delta Quadrant, Rostov knew he needed someone whom he could trust completely to be his right hand and there was only one name on that list, Simon Rowland's.

Having no family of his own, and presented with an opportunity of a lifetime, Rowland immediately agreed to join Rostov as his Chief of Staff.

NAME: Serina Valmont

RACE: Human

AGE: 36

Position: Director of Security

Serina Valmont was an orphan raised on the Mars colony. She spent most of her life in an orphanage or the streets in the roughest part of Mars. Growing up, her beauty attracted many and she was forced to quickly learn to defend herself.

She was a tough girl and when an opportunity arose to work on a freight vessel, she quickly seized the opportunity to leave Mars and never return. Those years working on the freighter taught her much, but most of all she learned how to survive. Those very skills and, of course, her physical attributes got her noticed by a mining operation who was looking for people to work security.

Valmont worked her way up the ranks and eventually became the personal bodyguard to the company's president. The man was a Ferengi who treated her terribly, but paid her well. Serina didn't know any better and was just happy to have achieved what she had.

That all changed on a trip to a trade delegation in the Delta Quadrant where she met a Special Envoy to the Federation Council by the name of Lestat Rostov. He had been at a session where Valmont accidentally bumped her boss in an effort to keep someone away from him and saw how he yelled at her. The next day, Rostov saw her having a drink alone at a pub. He approached her and started up a conversation. The two hit it off quickly and agreed to have dinner the next day in Rostov's private quarters. Serina was sure he had set this up to try and take advantage of her but to her surprise, he was again a perfect gentleman the whole night. Then he surprised her once again, by offering her a way out of this existence, as he had put it. A chance to work with someone respectable and who would make sure she was always well cared for.

From that moment on, Valmont became Rostov's personal bodyguard and now his Director of Security.

NAME: Sorak
RACE: Vulcan
AGE: 177
Position: Personal Valet

Sorak had been one of Lestat's teachers at a private school, prior to attending Starfleet Academy. The Vulcan had been impressed by the young man's ability to compensate for any intellectual shortcoming by using his personality to attain his desired outcome. A young Rostov liked how Sorak never bought in to any of his crap and always told him things as they were. He was also someone who looked out for Rostov and made sure he was eating and taking care of himself.

Years later, on one of Rostov's return visits to Paris, he went to visit his old teacher only to find out that the school had fired him. Lestat was able to track him down to a small, old apartment where the old Vulcan read books and passed the time between a few odd jobs he was able to find from time to time.

Rostov hated seeing his old teacher, whom he respected so much, in such dire straits. He quickly offered Sorak a job as his personal assistant. From that moment on, Sorak never left Lestat's side. As he aged more, he really became more an unofficial counselor of sorts that took care of Rostov. Eventually, he became Lestat's personal Valet. As such, he ran Lestat's household and organized his personal life. Sorak is Lestat's longest serving staff member.

NAME: Vatti Sh'tal

RACE: Andorian

AGE: 61

POSITION: Personal Assistant

Mrs. Sh'tal spent over 20 years working as one of Councilman Truman Alkobar's many assistants. As such she met Rostov early on in his career. The Andorian woman was quick, bold, efficient, elegant and took no grief from anyone. She was also not easily won over, but Rostov had a way about him that was different. Over the years of interacting with him, she eventually gave into his charm. But it was when her husband and son died in a shuttle craft accident, that their relationship took a different path.

Rostov had learned what a devoted mother she was to her son, who was slightly younger than himself. He also remembered her stories of her weekly breakfast's dates with him at their favorite Andorian pastry shop. After the accident, Rostov would bring her an Andorian pastry every Tuesday and share a cup of coffee before he went in to meet with Alkobar. This meant the world to Vatti, whom never allowed anyone to refer to her by her first name, except Lestat.

Eventually, Lestat asked her if she would be willing to work with him. Alkobar gave his permission, and Sh'tal became Rostov's personal assistant. With no strings holding her down, she was free to follow him anywhere.

NAME: Naresa Campos
RACE: Romulan/Human
AGE: 35
POSITION: Communications Director/Press Secretary

Campos was born to a Human father and Romulan mother and spent time on both Earth and Romulus. She was very bright and graduated with honors from the top Romulan University with a degree in communications.

She got a job at Galactic News Network (GNN), and quickly started writing news articles. She discovered a strong liking for investigative stories. She started looking into a story about rumored under the table deals that were taking place between the Federation and the Cardassians.

Her superiors were extremely happy with the progress she was making and where this story could end up. That was until her investigation led to a small bank that was owned by another bank, who had a board member who had close ties to the Federation. She attempted various times to reach him for an interview, although she was unsuccessful she persisted. Finally, after making somewhat of a spectacle at the person's office, she returned to her own only to find all her belongings boxed up.

Her months of work were all gone, even her backup had been wiped. Her boss wouldn't even see her, and she was forced out of the office by security.

The next several months went by and no news organization large or small would even grant her an audience. Campos was broke and took the only job she could find, as a waitress in a small café. One morning the café was unusually empty except for one gentleman in the far corner reading a PADD. As she walked up to him and he looked up, she recognized him immediately, it was Lestat Rostov.

He asked her to take a seat and explained how he had been impressed by her boldness and skills. She was furious and went off on him as she quickly put the pieces of the puzzle together. What happened next was unexpected, he offered her a job on his staff. He promised to not only give her access to a world she didn't know existed, but to protect her and always have her back. She was intrigued and although skeptical at first, accepted the offer.

Over the next couple of years she became one of his closest advisors. Campos was impressed by how Rostov handled situations and used the media to his advantage. With his appointment as Ambassador to the Delta Quadrant, he had promoted her to be his Director of Communications and Press Secretary.

NAME: Reze Rahe

RACE: Bajoran

AGE: 56

POSITION: Intelligence Attache

Not much is known about Reze Rahe, other than he worked as an Intelligence Officer for the Bajoran government. After several years working in the Delta Quadrant, he recently retired and returned to Bajor only to reappear again as the Intelligence Attache to Ambassador Rostov.

NAME: Katsu Nobu
RACE: Human
AGE: 42
POSITION: Captain of SS Liberatore

Nobu was raised in Tokyo, Japan. He had a very strict and traditional upbringing all the way to his attendance at Starfleet Academy. Katsu held various positions within Starfleet in both Operations and Security, but all aboard Starships.

He scored very high in all his evaluations, but was an outspoken critic of Starfleet Command. He was quick to complain about what he perceived to be Starfleet's lack of military power. It was this attitude that eventually got him assigned to a Starfleet Science vessel as First Officer.

The work was tedious and extremely boring. Nobu could not understand why Starfleet Command would waste, what he believed to be his talents, piloting a bunch of scientists around. Within two years of this assignment he resigned his commission.

Nobu found work at a private transportation company, commanding a freighter through some of the most dangerous parts of the galaxy.

When Ambassador Rostov learned that the Federation Council was giving him a new Starship to aid his mission, he poured through hundreds of personnel files to find a suitable Captain. When he reviewed Katsu's, he knew he had found the one.

Name: Truman Alkobar
RACE: Human
AGE: 72
POSITION: Federation Council Member, Head of the Federation Galactic Affairs Council

Alkobar was raised all over the Alpha and Beta Quadrants. His mother had been a Federation Ambassador to Vulcan and his father was a well-respected attorney who later served as Governor to a one of the largest Federation Colony's.

He excelled in school and as he grew he focused on political science. He steadily rose through the political ranks, which wasn't difficult due to his parents' connections. Truman was one of the youngest persons to ever be elected to the Federation Council, representing Earth. A seat he had held onto for decades to become one of the most powerful and influential members of the Council.

As Head of the Galactic Affairs Council, he was involved in almost every important issue that came before the general Council itself, and Alkobar used that to his advantage. He had many friends in very powerful places, along with his share of enemies.

Alkobar was a master politician, who knew how to play the system. He knew how and when he could push the boundaries, and more importantly he also knew when to fold and fight another day.

He took an immediate like to a young Lestat Rostov and saw the potential he possessed. Alkobar wanted to use that potential for his own benefit and quickly took Rostov under his wing. Throughout the years, what he had seen in Rostov had been proven right. He was exactly the right person to help Alkobar and his people, achieve their agenda. An agenda that was only known to a very select few.

The latest opportunity to exert power and influence in the Delta Quadrant with one of their own appointees was almost heaven sent. Alkobar knew that the time to come would either result in total victory or total defeat, there was no middle ground.

PEREGRINE TACTICAL FIGHTER

SPECIFICATIONS

| | |
|------------------|--|
| Type: | Attack Fighter/Courier |
| Length: | 14 meters |
| Beam: | 13.8 meters |
| Draft: | 4.53 meters |
| Wing Engines: | Micro Cochrane MABA |
| Impulse Engines: | Twin Fighter Micro engines |
| Speed: | WF 4.0 (Cruise), WF 5.0+ (Flank) |
| Armament: | 3 x Type IV phaser bank, 2 x Micro photon torpedo tube with 10 rounds |
| Defenses: | Deflector shields, Ablative Armor |
| Decks: | 1 |
| Crew: | 1 to 2 |
| Computer System: | LCAARs |

SS Libratore

Tempest Class Starship

Crew: 200

Length: 361 meters

Width: 179 meters

Height: 53 meters

Maximum speed: Warp 9.9

Auxiliary Craft: 2 Yellowstone Class Runabout, 1 Passenger Shuttle, 2 Type 7 Shuttle, 4 Work Bees, 10 Peregrine Class Tactical Fighters

The Tempest class was originally designed as a Starfleet warship with a standard crew compliment of 200 and a Wing of 10 Peregrine Class Tactical Fighters. However, when the Federation Council decided to increase their presence and control of the Delta Quadrant by appointing an Ambassador with a full delegation it was decided that the mission would require a capable starship.

At this time Starfleet had a Tempest class starship in space dock for a complete systems update. The Federation Council ordered this ship removed from Starfleet's fleet and recommissioned as a special Federation starship. The ship was gutted and completely retrofitted to reflect the specialized mission. All the latest technological power and security systems were installed to make sure the Starship was quick, configurable, and could adequately defend itself.

The ship was designed to be operated by a permanent crew of 50. This allowed plenty of additional space for the Ambassador's delegation as well as other delegations that may be invited onboard for meetings. Rostov himself was involved in the final design of the interiors and made sure the ship portrayed the power and prestige of the Federation. There were numerous meeting rooms and quarters that could be configured to host guests for any purpose. His own quarters were large, luxurious and very comfortable.

The Librator was a ship like no other, and re-named after a famous Diplomat who was known for using force when needed.

Federation Guard Standard Uniform

Federation Guard Combat Uniform

During the Federation's last major war, Starfleet was spread extremely and many within the Federation Council were questioning their ability. Then came the assassination of the Tellarite Councilman while leaving the Federation Council Chamber. Using this paranoia, a group led by Federation Councilman Truman Alkobar, was able to gain support for the creation of a new elite force solely dedicated to the security of the Council. This group was named the Federation Guard and reported directly to the Council, thereby keeping it outside of Starfleet's chain of command.

This group was highly skilled and somewhat mysterious as their identities were classified and relatively small in number. Most people throughout the galaxies had never seen one in person, however, that was about to change in the Delta Quadrant. In another surprising and unorthodox move, the Federation Council granted protection by this group to the new Ambassador to the Delta Quadrant. Before departing Earth, 50 Federation Guards were assigned to Ambassador Lestat Rostov.